Archives Association of British Columbia

The AABC is committed to working to preserve British Columbia's documentary heritage. As a member of the Canadian Council of Archives, the Association represents archival institutions in B.C. at the national level.

The AABC is committed to the following goals in support of its mission:

- To provide services to increase the capacity of archives throughout the province to preserve and provide access to B.C.'s documentary heritage;
- To build and maintain the provincial catalogue in support of the national catalogue;
- To allocate National Archival Development Program and other funding to the best uses in support of our mission; and
- To provide the infrastructure to support networking opportunities for members.

The AABC is a registered charity; our charitable status number is 86502-2529-RR0001. Attached below is a donation form. Your contribution will assist the AABC in its work to preserve British Columbia's documentary heritage. This work is done, as stated above, through the provision of educational opportunities for those who work in archives, coordination of projects to strengthen our provincial archival network, through the awards program which provides financial assistance to students in the UBC-MAS program, and through promotion of archives and archivists to government agencies and the general public.
