Friday April 29th Sessions

Session A: A National Survey of Acquisitions

Shamin Malmas, Cindy McLellan and Anneleen van Dijk
Dodson Room, 9:50-10:30am

For archives with limited budgets, the task of acquiring and preserving digital records over the long term is a daunting one. In the context of the InterPARES 3 Project and as one of its 'general studies', the authors have conducted a survey asking archivists working in small and medium-sized archives nine questions about their preparedness, strategies, and thoughts on the long term preservation of digital records in their areas of acquisition. The proposed paper will summarize and analyse the final results of the survey, and present the conclusions of the authors about the current and future state of the digital preparedness of small and medium sized archival organizations and programs across Canada.

Session B: The Reciprocal Research Network (RRN): Virtual Repatriation, User Generated Content and Archival Possibilities

Jason Woolman and Terry Point
Lillooet Room, 9:50-10:30am

The presentation will introduce the Reciprocal Research Network, its background and development, and provide example of its use in the museum community as a research tool. The goal of the presentation is to illustrate the RRN's potential use in archives as a means of gathering user generated context for collections as well as linking diverse collections such as those that exist in First Nations' and Museum archives. <http://www.rrnpilot.org/>

Session C: Cooperative Acquisition Strategies

Sarah Romkey
Lillooet Room, 10:45am-12:00pm

The purpose of this session will be to start a conversation amongst B.C. archivists about cooperative acquisition strategies. A cooperative acquisition strategy is when a group of institutions in a specific region agree to a set of principles and practices for making acquisitions, ensuring clarity across institutions where acquisitions and deaccessioning are concerned. Such strategies have been used to decrease feelings of competition between institutions (as was the case with GARM). The discussion will start with a 15 minute introduction to the concept of cooperative acquisition strategies and their application elsewhere, after which participants will be encouraged in small groups to discuss and debate the applicability of a cooperative acquisition strategy to British Columbia. The last part of the session will be devoted to discussion as a group.

Session D1: Archival Issues Top Ten List

Rosaleen Hill and Kelly Stewart

Dodson Room, 10:45am-11:20am

In this lighthearted session, Archives and Preservation Coordinators Kelly Stewart and Rosaleen Hill will highlight current issues and topics in the fabulous world of archives and preservation.

Session D2: Canadian Council of Archives Update

Lara Wilson

Dodson Room, 11:25am-12:00pm

Lara Wilson, chair of the Canadian Council of Archives (CCA), will provide the community with an update on CCA and archival community activities across Canada. Lara will highlight projects with a collaborative and/or strategic focus, such as Memory BC and other ICA AtoM deployments across Canada.

Session E1: Managing Electronic Legal Records in Islamic Syariah Courts: E-Syariah System

Umi Mokhtar

Dodson Room, 1:30-2:15pm

Managing electronic records in their original form is now a well-accepted practice as organizations move from manual to automation. This study seeks to find out whether the Department of Syariah Judiciary Malaysia includes records management elements, particularly for long-term preservation of records, in its Electronic Syariah (E-Syariah) system. The development approach of E-Syariah has only exclusively considered the element of information technology, i.e. providing speedy, efficient and effective access and retrieval of information. Records management elements, particularly appraisal and long-term preservation are not considered. Thus, the framework to be developed by this study will take into consideration the records management elements namely the preservation function.

Session E2: Network of Structures and People: Developing and Implementing a Recordkeeping System

Elaine Goh

Dodson Room, 2:15pm-3:00pm

This paper highlights the need to consider organizational cultural issues that can exist amongst different organizations and even within the same organization. Based on research conducted in the context of the InterPARES project, it will examine the varying worldviews of different groups of stakeholders - archivists, records managers, record creators and IT and the organizational dynamics and tensions involved when different subcultures interact with one another. The paper draws on aspects from the management science literature to examine the interplay amongst people, structures, records management tools and technologies. It provides an insight on what facilitates and constraints human behaviour in terms of the records creation process and its implications for archivists keen to institute controls on the management and preservation of records.

Session F1: First Nations and Archives: Issues and Possibilities

Jason Woolman and Larissa Grant

Lillooet Room, 1:30-2:15pm

A discussion about the unique challenges facing First Nations Archives, including community outreach, cultural issues, and special access considerations.

Session F2: Spreading the Word: An Outreach and Awareness Strategy for the City of Vancouver Archives

Leslie Mobbs

Lillooet Room, 2:15pm-3:00pm

The City of Vancouver Archives undertakes many activities to increase public awareness including strengthening relationships with stakeholders, establishing partnerships, building a community of interest and leveraging technology such as the use of social media. Our strategic approach is a work-in-progress and the session will explore how current initiatives fit with the overall themes and the key elements for developing an outreach and awareness strategy.

Saturday April 30th Session

Panel Discussion: All for One and One for All: Networking and Cooperation

Jana Buhlmann, Gary Mitchell, Janet Turner, Jane Morrison, Jennifer Yuhasz, Alissa Cherry

Lillooet Room, 10:30am-12:00pm

In this session, archivists working in federal, provincial, municipal, First Nations, university, and community contexts will talk about how their institutions draw upon and develop networks fulfill their respective mandates.
